President's Message

I hope everyone will have a wonderful New Year and 2000 brings you many blessings. Before I greet 2000 I would like to look back at 1999.

The ILNA Fall Show was a rousing success. I would like to thank all those that helped. A special thanks goes to the ILNA Board and Officers, especially Clayton, Bill, and Frank. I need to thank Krause Publications for the hospitality room, and Donna Wasmer and Jennifer Kuester for keeping the suite stocked full of refreshments. A big thanks to Scotsman Coin and Jewelry for the door prize. A beautiful Canadian watch won by Mr. William Pysmack. Also, thank you to Scotsman and NTL Auction for the Friday night auction. It was a great success with 950 lots. The exhibits at the show were simply outstanding. I wish to thank all the exhibitors for bringing their displays. The speakers on Saturday gave some of the most interesting, entertaining, and educational talks. Judging by the large attendance at Saturday's talks, everyone involved should be proud. My thanks go to John Wright, Tim Kyzivat and Jim Kaczor for their time and efforts. The Ramada Inn and staff did a magnificent job remodeling the hotel. They treated us with the utmost respect and professionalism, and for that I thank you. I would also like to thank Ray Dillard for the show's elongated. In addition, thanks to all who donated to the YN auction. Finally a big thank you to all the dealers and ILNA members for attending.

What about 2000! First up is the ILNA Spring show, hosted by the Corn Belt Coin Club and Tazewell Numismatic Society, on April 9, 2000 at the Mark Twain Hotel in East Peoria. The show is completely sold out. A youth auction is scheduled for that afternoon. Please stop by the ILNA table and say "hello".

If any club would like to host the 2001 Spring Show, please contact me.

The Fall Show is set for September 7th to the 10th at the Ramada Inn off of I-80 and Route 1. I am pleased to announce that this will be a Central States Numismatic Society Show. ILNA will be host to CSNS like we were in 1998. It is shaping up to be an outstanding show. I believe it will sell out early. So get in touch with Clayton as soon as you can. I should have more details on the show in the next Digest.

The ILNA editor is in need of some articles. Please take the time and send one in. The Digest would like to be first in the ANA Club Publication Contest. So some articles on Illinois topics would help, or on any numismatic subject. If you are currently a YN, then an article would help meet a requirement for the scholarship to Colorado Springs ANA Summer Seminar. ILNA will be giving an award to the Best Article of 2000. So get your articles in to our editor.

MAKING SENSE

John D Wright, NLG

This was a year of continued organized bloodshed on at least three continents. In Europe, Napoleon was still winning battles while he slowly lost ground in the war of attrition. In South America there were insurrections against Spanish rule while Spain was preoccupied with assuring her own survival at home. In the new United States there were repeated sorties, battles, and campaigns as each side maneuvered for a strategic edge or a decisive victory.

Matthew Flinders publishes his book "A Voyage to Terra Australis", coining a new name for what until now had been called the "Great Southern Continent".

The tides of war have turned against Napoleon, who makes a desperate gamble to cut the allied supply lines. He marches his armies eastward from Paris, leaving the city undefended. Unwisely, he writes to his wife concerning his movement. The courier is captured, the plan is exposed, and the allies skirt around Napoleon's advance to occupy Paris and force Napoleon's abdication. He is "banished" to the island of Elba with all of his titles retained and a "pension" of two million French Francs per year.

Mexico declares independence from Spain, culminating the rebellion started by Father Hidalgo a few years ago. The Constitution of the new Mexican Republic abolishes class distinction and slavery, beating her northern neighbor to this moral conclusion by half a century.

In the United States the wartime atmosphere pushes prices upward. A Harvard education now costs $300 per year. In August the British capture and burn most government buildings in our Capital. The President's wife is able to save several State papers and a single portrait of George Washington before their flight from the burning city.

The Library of Congress is able to save only a few of its most valuable papers. Thomas Jefferson will later offer his library of over 6500 books at cost, and this will become the nucleus of the new Library of Congress. The Executive Mansion, formerly of grey stone, is whitewashed to hide the damages from fire and smoke. It has been white ever since.

The next month a newly-built US fleet annihilates a British squadron on Lake Champlain, ending British efforts to divide the United States down the Hudson Valley. And two days later a Washington lawyer aboard a British warship pens a poem on the back of an envelope, labelling it "Defense of Fort McHenry". The poem will be published in the Baltimore Patriot, set to the music of "Anacreon in Heaven", and will become our National Anthem over a hundred years later in 1931.

Selecting a Dealer

Many collectors debate how to pick a dealer. How do I find a dealer I can trust? How do I find a dealer that will offer honest sincere help? This is way method.

Basically there are three types of dealers. Those that give nothing back to the hobby, those that only give back to the hobby when asked, and those that help anyone, support their local and state clubs.

The dealers that give nothing back to the hobby do not support YN auctions. Many do not even belong to their local club, much less help at local club meetings. They do not even belong to state clubs, unless they must be a member to attend state shows. They do not help support local or state clubs financially. They make no effort to give back to the hobby. Sometimes they are even rude at shows. Sometimes they will even go up to another dealers table and try to take collectors to their table.

The second type of dealer does not treat the non-customer the same as a paying customer. He is a member of his local club, but does not attend many local meetings, or offer to help. He will donate to YN auctions but makes it a big production. He is usually some what helpful to new collectors. He will answer a few questions, put lets the collector know his time is valuable. At shows, he also complains about every little detail, while not offering to help.

The third type of dealer will offer help to any collector. Paying customer or not. They are members of their local clubs and help during club meetings and club shows. They donate freely and sincerely to YN auctions. They enjoy helping their future customers. They give freely of their time and financially support their local and state clubs. These dealers give back to the hobby that provides them an income. These dealers are usually having fun at coin shows.

Attend local club meetings and see what dealers are in attendance. Watch to see who other club members ask for help. Watch to see what dealers are helping promote the hobby.

Spend time with a dealer. The better he understands your collecting interest, the better service he can provide.

As a rule, the dealer that has the most invested in the hobby is the best dealer to support. After all, they have the most to lose. Support dealers that support local and state clubs.

Tour de Mint

by Frank M. Zapushek

No, this is not an article about a car race or a flavor of ice cream. In August, I was fortunate to receive a private ground floor tour of the Philadelphia Mint. I will be reporting on my tour in this years issues of the Digest. This will be an ILNA exclusive.

Lyndon B. Johnson was President of the United States, Henry H. Fowler was Secretary of the Department Of The Treasury and Eva Adams was Director of the Bureau Of The Mint when the new building for the Philadelphia Mint was dedicated in 1968.

Until recently, the Philadelphia Mint made all the dies used by the different Branch Mints. Now the Denver Mint produces its own dies in a state of the art die making shop.

From the early 70's to about 1982, the Philadelphia Mint mixed the alloys and melted them to produce the metals needed for planchets. In about 1982, OSHA standards and environment concerns, required the melting furnaces and rolling mills to be upgrade to controlling fumes, smoke and possible injuries to the employees. Since this was not practical, the Mint removed the melting furnaces and rolling mills. They started having the metals produced by outside vendors.

The Mint has placed coinage presses in part of the space used by the melting furnaces. This has helped the Mints ever increasing need for more coinage.

The Philadelphia Mint is basically divided into six sections. The die making process, metal composition verification, the non-automated coin production, the automated coin production, medal production and visitor section.

The visitor section includes a gift shop, artifacts from the older mints and a visitor viewing section. The viewing area has a history of the minting process and on about the third floor you have an view of part of the mint.

By now I am sure that you have homed in on a year close to reality. These events all occurred in 1814. Philadelphia, though threatened, was not invaded. The US Mint there continued to produce what coins it could from its dwindling supply of precious metal and copper. For the first time ever the copper supply was exhausted, and cent production ended in September.

The total US coinage of 1814 consisted of four denominations, totalling just a bit over twenty tons of coins. Over a million half dollars made up the bulk of this output, augmented by about a ton in dimes, a bit over four tons of copper cents, and about 300 pounds of 1814 half eagles.

The cents of this year are the last of a beautiful type known as the "Turban" or "Classic Head". This is the most common year of this type, but most are found worn, rough, black, or a combination of all three — almost as if they might have barely survived the great DC fire.

The two varieties of US cents dated 1814 are easy to tell apart. The first has a crosslet 4 as on all US coins struck in 1794 and 1804. Note that the plain-4 "1804" dollar is a product of the 1830's and the plain-4 "1804 Restrike" cent is a product of the 1860's. The second 1814 cent has a sans-serif ("plain") 4 as on US coins of 1824 through the early 1840's and many thereafter. Neither variety is scarce, which makes either of them an affordable memento of this fascinating year.

John D. Wright is the author of "The CENT Book", which covers U.S. cents of 1816-1839. He has collected U.S. large cents for over forty years.

These are the YN's on the right side of the room at the YN Auction in Harvey. Each year this group of young collectors gets larger. The dealers at the ILNA Coin Show really came through for the kids.

These are the YN's on the left side of the YN auction room. The little cutie in the first roll on the right was an aggressive bidder. She was even bidding against herself. But she had fun.

Outside Vendors:

Three different vendors supply the cent planchets. These cent planchets must be within the allowable variances set by the mint. After the cent planchets are stamped out by a blanking press, the planchets are feed through an Upset Mill. This produces the curved edge on the planchet, Type II planchet. The curved edge helps increase die life and improve the affect of the dies striking the planchets. The curved edge helps the metal flow into the dies.

After going through the Upset Mill, the outer plating of copper is applied to the cent planchets. The cent planchet are now ready to be shipped to the mint.

The dime, quarter, half and dollar planchets are still produced at the Philadelphia Mint. But the coiled strips of metal are produced by outside vendors. Vendors deliver large coiled rolls of the clad strips, ready to be stamped into planchet. These large coiled rolls must meet the strict variances provided by the mint.

When the coiled rolls of metal are delivered, samples are taken and check to verify that they are within the variances required.

Inside the Mint:

I arrived at the Employee entrance at 9:30 AM. I was greeted very pleasantly by a very big guard. The guard required that all my coins, keys, camera and camera case be locked in a small locker.

When the tour guide arrived, he invited me to walk through a metal detector and gave me a few simple rules. Touch nothing, touch nothing and touch nothing.

The first section we entered was the coiled roll storage section. Here the coils were waiting to be tested to verify they met the variances required by the mint.

The coiled rolls are feed into a blanking press that produces the planchets used in the coinage process. After the planchets are produced, they are feed through the Upset Mill and then on to be washed and dried. This process is completely automated.

While I was touring the mint, they were busy making planchets for quarters. I was able to watch the entire process for the Georgia quarter. It was a real treat to watch the planchets being made and then have a warm Georgia quarter placed in my hand. My tour guide caught it in mid air as it fell out the back end of the coinage press. It was better than smelling bread as it 's baked. Stanta Clause is real, he was there at that moment.

Next issue we will cover the die making process and the non-automated cent production side of the Philadelphia Mint.

ILNA in the 21st Century

We are now in the 21 Century and ILNA is ahead of its time. ILNA is one of the most aggressive coin clubs in the World. We are doing more for our membership and the hobby than any club except the ANA.

The Officers and Board Members of ILNA are working to give you a club that is second to none. A club that returns more services to its members, a club that keeps its members informed.

Our web page is drawing national attention. We added a counter on our web page on November 17, 1999. Since then, we have welcomed over 5,000 visitors. Now we are about to announce a new service to the collecting population from around the world.

About the time you receive this digest, ILNA will be unveiling a new section to its web page. We will be offering help to collectors and non-collectors, we will be answering questions about coins, currency, tokens, medals, and counterfeit detection. Several members of ILNA have volunteered to answer questions for ILNA members and the public.

ILNA is also announcing to its members that we are now offering "ILNA Alert" notices. If anything new happens at ILNA or a big story develops about numismatics, you will be notified by email. No longer is it necessary to wait for the digest, ILNA members will be among the first to read the news.

If you have not received the email notice from ILNA, just send a message to Frank M. Zapushek at coins@davesworld.net. You will be added to the "ILNA Alert" email list.

Dealers that support ILNA care about the hobby, please support the dealers that support ILNA.

Welcome to the 21st Century, ILNA was there waiting for the rest of the hobby.
